

PHI DELTA EPSILON PRESENTS:

first annual

Gelfand Lecture

HEALTH & HEALTHCARE: What's the Difference?

We in the United States spend over half of the world's health care bill yet die younger than people in over thirty other countries. Medical care turns out to be a relatively small determinant of health of societies. Attention to early life when perhaps half of our health as adults is programmed matters, as does socioeconomic status and economic inequality. Medical doctors need to understand population health and treat sick societies as well as sick people.

- Stephen Bezruchka

M.D., Stanford University
M.P.H., Johns Hopkins University

May 4, 2017 | 7:30 PM | HUB South Ballroom
4001 E Stevens Way NE, Seattle, WA

Free admission